

A Man's Heart

Lori Copeland | Zondervan

Life is throwing Jules Matias a lot of curveballs and they're coming at her all at once. Jules has had to break off her engagement to Cruz Delgado not once, but twice. She loves him, but she had good reason, or a good person—Pop—to make such a sacrifice. Now she must cope with Pop's death and shoulder the tension with her sister, who wasn't included in their father's will. Jules' chief concerns are caring for her father's potato farm and restoring a relationship with her sister. But when her best friend dies from cancer, Jules is also left to keep her promise to care for her friend's two small children. With all these burdens to carry, Jules must rely on God for answers and strength.
