

After Affair, Presbyterian Church Strips Tullian Tchividjian of Ministry Credentials

Billy Graham's grandson has lost his ministry credentials.

The South Florida Presbytery deposed Tullian Tchividjian of his pastoral credentials but said they were still committed to his pastoral care.

"Our goal in doing this is to both protect the integrity of the Church from which his credentials were given while, at the same time, wrapping Tullian in the grace offered by Jesus Christ to all those who confess sin, pursue repentance and desire restoration," reads the Presbytery statement.

Tchividjian resigned his post as senior pastor of Coral Ridge Presbyterian Church in June, citing an "inappropriate" relationship.

Since his resignation, Tchividjian has called his life a nightmare, saying he understands why pastors caught in adultery commit suicide.

Billy Graham's grandson, though, is on the path to restoration. Let's pray for all involved.
