

Alex Jones Declares 'Demon-Possessed' Co-Host Is 'Dead' to Him

Political commentator Alex Jones is making his thoughts and opinions known to the world about his former co-host, Owen Shroyer.

According to the Daily Beast, Jones discussed Shroyer's departure from InfoWars as Shroyer also explained why he left the organization.

Shroyer remarked that Jones had called him "too anti-Trump" and said that he was hard to work for.

"Alex is not easy to work for, and that's fine, that's OK," Shroyer says. "He says I'm too negative, I'm a pessimist, whatever, I'm too anti-Trump. I said, 'OK, I'll just take some time off, I'll just disappear.' If Alex thinks I'm too negative, then maybe he's right."

Jones responded to these statements saying, "Owen Shroyer's dead to me. If he goes on there and repents to Jesus and apologizes for being demon possessed or whatever it is he is, then I will forgive him."

Jones also claimed that Shroyer asked for an increase in pay to stay, but told him that he was “promote my new show on InfoWars.” After this, Jones says he ended the conversation on the phone and had “tear in my eye.”
