

America's Churches Support 'Demonic' Diet, Naturopathic Doctor Says

We all know America as a leader among nations. And we also lead in the Christian world. But is our leadership pulling people into the demonic realm?

"We have absolutely promoted sickness within our church gatherings by serving these foods that are not foods at all," naturopathic doctor Mark Sherwood tells Dr. Steve Greene on a recent episode of the Greenelines podcast on the Charisma Podcast Network. "They're actually ' Frankenfood,' next to demonic foods, and we serve them with a celebratory mindset."

Sherwood says these evil-inducing foods have led us to be "perpetually inundated with avoidable illnesses in the church, which are type 2 diabetes, many cancers, heart disease, Alzheimer's, dementia, osteoporosis, non-immune, and we then think, OK, let's call the prayer chain. But we actually go to the doctor first, which is the most contrary thing that I've probably ever heard.

"A lot of this is not just ignorance; it's actually rebellion" Sherwood says. While he doesn't place blame solely at the feet of pastors, he adds that he doesn't understand why they and other leaders who have the truth about good nutrition often refuse to change.

"The standard American diet/lifestyle is utterly demonic to the core—not of God, never of God," Sherwood says. "All these foods we class as foods today have never been foods. Satan's whole idea and concept is about substitution. He can't create; he confuses, he distorts ... Jesus calls Himself the bread of life; at the same time, what is the thing that people eat when they go to the comfort food? They go to bread. ... When they go to Jesus for a Comforter, the Holy Spirit is our Comforter. He's our bread, not comfort food ... and yet we go there, and we think nothing of it. And then we laugh about it, and we joke about it."
