

‘Angels Were Watching Over’ Mother Who Wandered the Woods for Days After Near-Fatal Wreck

Her sister credits prayers and angels for saving Lisa Holman’s life.

The Alabama mother made national headlines last week when she disappeared after her car crashed down an embankment.

“Believe in the power of prayer,” Holman’s sister, Kathy Holman Caufield, tells . “I believe angels were watching over her and protecting her every step of the way. I don’t have any shadow of doubt about that.”

According to ABC, Holman’s vehicle was found wrecked Friday sometime after 9 p.m. off CR 36 between Bent Creek Drive and Brasher Road in Pelham, Alabama, just outside of Birmingham, Shelby County Sheriff’s Office told ABC station WBMA.

Search-and-rescue crews combed the wooded area all day Saturday with no success. On Sunday morning, they found Holman, alive and well, minus some broken bones.

“She said she prayed the entire time,” Caufield says.

Those who have followed the story also recognize the rescue as an act of God.

“Thank you JESUS!” one person commented.

Several other wrote, “Praise God” or similar sentiments.
