

Anne Graham Lotz and Daughter: Jesus' Return is 'Imminent'

Bible teacher Anne Graham Lotz and her daughter Rachel-Ruth Lotz Wright are on a mission to help prepare believers for Jesus' imminent return.

"I don't want to leave anything to chance," Graham Lotz, the daughter of late evangelist Billy Graham, wrote on Facebook. "I want to be ready. I want to prepare now to meet Jesus."

"Jesus is coming! All indicators point to the fact that His return is imminent. While expectancy among people of faith worldwide is at a fever pitch, I wonder if you and I are actually prepared for that world-changing, history-altering, heart-stopping moment in time," Lotz Wright wrote on another social media post.

"Again and again, the Bible tells us that Jesus will come a thief in the that His followers need to be prepared to meet Him at any moment," she added.

Anne told CBN News' Prayer Link that recent health scares have shifted both of their focuses to the moment the Bride of Christ readies herself for the marriage supper of the Lamb as mentioned in Revelation 19:7.

"He's coming for us whether that's at His return or at our death and because of my age and having gone through breast you never know if you are going to step into eternity," she cautioned.

✖ As Charisma News has reported, Rachel-Ruth narrowly survived two heart attacks in January. She was diagnosed at the time with spontaneous coronary artery dissection.

“The inside of one of my arteries was just shredded,” Lotz Wright recalled. “I should not have lived. I was dying and God miraculously brought me back. And at any second we could we are not promised tomorrow.”

The pair ultimately want to be proactive in preparing their hearts for Jesus. And they want others to be prepared as well.
