Joyce Meyer and Deborah Bedford collaborate once again to offer a fictional tale of a deep truth: God's redemptive grace.

Sarah Harper has joined the rat race with dogged determination. She is a wife and mother of two trying to gain her worth through her success as an investment broker. She believes that being successful and never saying no to her boss is the true pursuit of happiness. But it comes at a high price: her family.

When Sarah is in a car accident, she encounters an angel and experiences her own past, present and future in a Charles Dickens-like epiphany. As Susan recovers she is determined to make changes in her life. But the real-life application of her transformation is more difficult because she fears being rejected by her family.

Eventually, through God's unconditional love, Sarah is able to embrace what is really important in life.
