

Assessing Your Value

☒ Your values guide your life. The life you lead today is the product of the standards you used to make your decisions in the past. If your values were good you probably made some good choices. On the other hand, any past wrong values may have resulted in bad decisions.

Let's do an assessment of your current value system.

Ask yourself about the value that you place on ...

- family
- honesty
- integrity
- finances
- faith.

Too many people forget about their values in their pursuit of success. Albert Einstein once said, "Try not to become a man of success, but rather try to become a man of value." Einstein became an extremely successful man. His success is recorded in history for future generations to read. Yet his pursuit was to become a man of value. Success followed his values.

Decisions based on wrong principles may have brought you to where you are today. But you must remember that your future is not determined by your past. Now that you have assessed your values from the past, you are ready to move forward with a new value system for your future. Get ready for a great future filled with great decisions!
