

Billy Graham Speaks to Nation in History Channel Ad

At age 94, Billy Graham still has a heart to reach the United States with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

“My father, Billy Graham, has had a great burden for this nation,” Franklin Graham said.

That passion will culminate this November—the week of Graham’s 95th birthday—with a nationwide outreach called My Hope America with Billy Graham. Following the My Hope model that’s been successfully used in more than 50 countries, Christians will invite friends and neighbors into their homes to watch a program featuring Billy Graham, then hear a brief testimony from the host. Thousands of individuals, pastors and churches across the country have already signed up and many people are praying for the movement of God across America.

To help promote this massive relationship evangelism movement, a television ad featuring new footage of Graham will be shown during the History Channel’s series, The Bible, Palm Sunday (March 24) and during the Easter Sunday series finale March 31.

Watch the 30-second ad below. And find out how you and your church can get involved with My Hope America with Billy Graham, by clicking here. Or click here to read the original story at .