

Candace Cameron Bure Hopes New Movie Will Put Audiences in the Christmas Spirit

With the Christmas season just around the corner, Candace Cameron Bure has a message for believers who haven't been able to enjoy the holidays in the past.

"The hustle and bustle of the Christmas season will arrive before we know it," says Bure, the star of GAC Media's upcoming film titled "A Christmas ... Present." "But it's through the quiet moments that we hear God speak to us, directing our path to what's most important."

Bure says she hopes her new film—her first venture with GAC after 14 years with the Hallmark Channel—will inspire others to embrace what Christmas is all about.

"The movie is about slowing down enough to recognize what's right in front of our eyes," Bure said, emphasizing the faith theme at the center of the story.