

Candace Cameron Bure Warns: Watching Scary Movies Invites 'Stuff' Into the Home

There will be no jump scares in Candace Cameron Bure's house.

On a recent episode of her eponymously named podcast, Bure admitted to her guest, Pastor Jonathan Pokluda, her family occasionally pokes fun at her when she refers to the TV as "the portal," a spiritual vortex of sorts through which – at least from the "Full House" star's perspective – all kinds of things enter the home.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

"Like if you're watching this, or you're playing this video game, or whatever, that's a portal that could let stuff inside our home," she explained. "I don't even want someone watching a scary movie in our house on the TV, because, to me, that's just a portal."

Bure, the chief creative officer for Great American Media, has spent her entire career in the film and television industry. She first rose to stardom as D.J. Tanner on the hit 90s sitcom "Full House" before making a name for herself as the central character in feel-good TV movies.

Get your FREE CHARISMA NEWSLETTERS today! Stay up-to-date with current issues, Holy Spirit news, Christian teachings, Charisma videos & more!

While the Christian star acknowledged she understands the movie business – aware it's all makeup and special effects – she argued there's "still something that can be incredibly demonic" happening.

"I feel like it's a portal that gets opened up and let in," Bure said of certain movies and shows.

Join Charisma Magazine Online to follow everything the Holy Spirit is doing around the world!

Pokluda agreed with Bure and said he's heard many Christians claim the things they are watching or engaging in are "just" for entertainment and are largely innocuous.

"This is how [Satan] works," he warned. "He tries to disguise under that stuff. That's what he wants you to feel. Like if you ever are like, 'Oh, I'm not gonna be impacted by that.' That's what Satan wants you to feel. That's the whole essence of it."

To read the full story, visit our content partners at Faithwire.

Reprinted with permission from . Copyright © 2025 The Christian Broadcasting Network Inc. All rights reserved.