

CBS Criticized for Airing 'Trans Pastor' and Heretical Doctrine

CBS interviewed a transgender pastor on its morning show, who said that God created "man and woman" as well as "everyone else."

"There are a lot of people who say that, according to the Bible, God created man and woman, and that couldn't be more clearly defined," the interviewer asked. "How do you respond to them?"

"It's hard to relate it to modern-day times because it wasn't written for 2024. It was written for then," the pastor said. "When we read in the Scripture that God created man and woman, yes, and God created everyone else, as well."

Another radical pastor claimed last month that Jesus would help women have abortions.

"If Jesus were here today, He would be a clinic escort, distracting women from the hatred of protesters," she said, adding that Jesus would offer "support and love as they end their pregnancy."

She further stated: "If Jesus were giving His sermon today, He might also have said, 'Blessed are those who end pregnancies, for they will be known for their lovingkindness.'"
