

Chaos Erupts at Sean Feucht Worship Concert As Protestor Launches Smoke Bombs

An unexpected frenzy took place during a Sean Feucht worship concert when a protestor threw smoke bombs in the middle of Feucht's performance.

Feucht, who has been on the Let Us Worship Tour in Canada, has faced incredibly tough obstacles since heading on this latest tour. During his time in Montreal, Antifa protestors came out in front of the church where Feucht's event was being held. This anger against Feucht eventually led to one man throwing pink smoke bombs at him while he was in the middle of singing.

Speaking to Rebel News, Feucht said: "I saw a guy who is clearly not a church person run down the aisle, took the smoke bombs out of his pockets and lit them on the side, inside of the church during mid-worship song, and then chucked them right at my head."

☐FIREBOMB UPDATE:

"So I saw a guy who is clearly not a church person run down the aisle, a big fat guy in white, really angry, and he took the smoke bombs out of his pockets and lit them on the side, inside of the church during mid-worship song, and then chucked them right at my..."

"We were just hit by a crazy car," Feucht said in a video posted to X. "It was out of control and swerving everywhere. I don't know if it was intentional, I don't know what, but it rammed into our bus, and we were all sleeping and felt it just 'bam' our think everyone's safe, everyone's okay. This is wild. I don't remember the last time I've experienced warfare like this..."

A car just rammed into our bus outside of Montreal!!

Praise God everyone here is safe!! Please Keep us in your prayers! ☺☺
