

Christian Doctor Murdered, Obama Invited to Church, and More

☒ Martin Luther King dominated many of the headlines on Monday. But serious and interesting news was also reported across the World Wide Web. Here are four headlines I found noteworthy as I set out to report on the stories that matter most to Charismatic believers.

A Muslim stormed into an Iraqi hospital and shot a Christian doctor point blank in the head in yet another targeted attack against Christians. Fox News reports.

Meanwhile, Egypt sentenced a Muslim man to death Sunday for killing six Christians and a Muslim police guard outside a church. The New York Times has the full story.

Churches in the D.C. area are still waiting and hoping President Barack Obama will pick a home church. A Methodist Episcopal Church offered a direct invitation. Read more about it in the Washington Post.

Has the King James Bible changed the way we speak? The BBC takes a look at the impact of the KJV on our language over the past 400 years.