

Christian Schools Now Teaching God Is 'Gender-Neutral'

A series of Catholic schools in the Australian city of Brisbane has rolled out new policies aimed at ensuring God is interpreted as "gender-neutral."

The girls' schools, including All Hallows, Stuartholme, Loreto College and Stuartholme, are all attempting to push for a more feminist interpretation of the Scriptures, and insist that, for example, the word "Godself" is more appropriate than the term "himself."

"As we believe God is neither male or female, Stuartholme tries to use gender-neutral terms in prayers ... so that our community deepens their understanding of who God is for them, how God reveals Godself through creation, our relationships with others and the person of Jesus," a school spokeswoman told The Courier-Mail.

Click here to read the rest of this story from our content partners at Faithwire.