

Could Alien Disclosure Be Closer Than We Think? Alleged 'Time Traveler' Makes Stunning 2028 Prediction

A man identifying himself as a time traveler from the year 2045 is generating online discussion after an interview renewed public fascination with UFOs and government transparency.

According to the Daily Mail, the man, who calls himself Adam Archon, originally recorded the interview in March 2019 for the YouTube channel Apex TV. In it, he makes a series of extraordinary predictions about humanity's future, including claims that extraterrestrials will publicly reveal themselves, cash will disappear, and the United States will cease to exist as an independent nation—all within the next several years.

Archon, whose face was blurred and voice altered during the interview, claimed without providing evidence that he was born on Dec. 6, 2019, and traveled back in time from 2045 to witness history firsthand. He said time travel had already been invented by 1981 but remained classified until its public release in 2028.

"Yes, it is true that aliens did land on Earth in August 2028," Archon said during the interview. "We have known of the existence of aliens before 2028, but it isn't until 2028 that it becomes public knowledge."

He further alleged that many UFO sightings reported today are actually future time travelers visiting historical events. Archon also claimed the beings who allegedly make contact with humanity in 2028 "do not come from space," though he declined to elaborate, saying doing so could create a paradox.

According to the Daily Mail, Apex TV connected Archon to what it described as an active lie detector during the interview and later claimed his answers registered as truthful. The publication noted, however, that it provided no independent verification of the polygraph results.

Among Archon's other predictions is the arrival of an implanted microchip called "The One" beginning in February 2029. He claimed the device would replace cash and traditional currencies worldwide while allowing users to make purchases, improve brain function and enhance overall health.

The Daily Mail noted that implantable payment chips are already in limited use today, though they lack the advanced capabilities Archon described.

Archon also claimed the United States would no longer exist as an independent nation by 2030, instead becoming part of a global government divided into continental districts. He alleged the new system would eventually be governed by an artificial intelligence known as "The Light," which would be monitored by a small group of government officials to ensure ethical decision-making.

Looking even farther ahead, Archon predicted scientists would clone dinosaurs by 2045, creating parks where visitors could observe prehistoric creatures and even travel back in time to witness history firsthand.

The Daily Mail also revisited an earlier January 2019 interview with Archon, noting that while he predicted an increase in UFO sightings later that year, several other forecasts did not materialize. Among them was a claim that a controversial robot would be released in 2020. The publication also observed that he made no mention of the COVID-19 pandemic or other major global events that unfolded in the years that followed.

The article further highlighted apparent inconsistencies within Archon's own timeline.

In one portion of the interview, he claimed Yolanda Renee King—the granddaughter of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.—would become the president. However, the Daily Mail pointed out that this prediction conflicts with his separate claim that the United States would no longer exist as an independent nation by 2030. Under current constitutional requirements, King would not become eligible to run for president until 2043.

While physicists have theorized that certain interpretations of Albert Einstein's general theory of relativity leave room for concepts involving time travel, there remains no scientific evidence demonstrating that humans can travel backward through time. Likewise, despite ongoing investigations into unidentified anomalous phenomena, the U.S. government has repeatedly stated that no verified physical evidence of extraterrestrial life has been publicly confirmed.

For now, Archon's claims remain unsubstantiated and highly speculative, but the resurfaced interview continues to capture attention as public interest grows surrounding UFO disclosures, emerging technology and questions about what the future may hold.
