

David Jeremiah Asks for 'Strong African-American' to Rise Up With Donald Trump

Flanked by famed evangelists including Kenneth Copeland and Paula White, David Jeremiah prays over the man who could be the next president of the United States.

Donald Trump stands in the middle, his hands on what appears to be a Bible as the men and women lift him up to God.

"Lord I pray you will bring into his life a strong African-American who can stand with him and represent that community so that his voice can be heard even in a stronger way there," Jeremiah prays.

Watch the video to see more.