

Deliverance Minister: The Spiritual War on Marriage

Conflict and dissension attack our marriages daily, but not because of normal marital issues. There is a war taking place in the spiritual realm.

Spouses are in different places in their spiritual walk, and it creates tension and an instability in marriages.

The No. 1 complaint I hear from married women is that their men aren't where they need them to be spiritually. I hear comments such as "He doesn't want to pursue God," "I can't worship in my own home" and "I can't pray out loud." Women keep trying to change their men but to no avail, and the closer the ladies come to Jesus the further away they get from their spouse.

How do we tolerate or put up with where another person isn't spiritually? Should we tolerate it and shut up, or should we speak out and do our part to help them grow in the Lord?

These are tough questions, but in this podcast, author and deliverance minister Kathy DeGraw gives good Spirit-led, practical advice on how to deal with your marriage and how to handle spiritual differences. {eo}
