

Donald Trump Just Revealed His Favorite Book. Want to Guess?

Donald Trump has kept audiences around the country hanging on his every word. But he's revealed that he depends on the Word. At the local Republican Party's Lincoln Day Dinner in Birch Run, Michigan, on Tuesday, Trump talked about the pitfalls of President Obama's nuclear deal with Iran – including the fact that it does nothing for Americans being held hostage. The Donald said he could do a better job negotiating with the mullahs and mentioned his book, The Art of the Deal – which a member of the audience had in his possession. "Hold that book up," Trump told the man. "That's my second favorite book of all time. You know what my favorite is?" he asked. "The Bible!" he said, giving a thumbs-up. "Nothing beats the Bible, not even The Art of the Deal. Not even close." Here's more proof of the Bible's divine power: It can even wring a moment of humility out of Donald Trump. The moment begins at 4:54 in the video clip below: