

Donald Trump Says He Has Proof 'Vicious Lies' Are 'Totally and Absolutely False'

Thursday, during a rally in West Palm Beach, Fla., Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump for the first time personally responded to new attacks in the liberal mainstream media, alleging he had inappropriately touched women in the past.

"These vicious claims about me of inappropriate conduct with women are totally and absolutely false," he said. "The Clintons know it, and they know it very well. These claims are all fabricated. They're pure fiction, and they're outright lies. These events never, ever happened and the people that said them meekly fully understand."

Saying the timing of the claims alone was suspect, particularly as WikiLeaks unloaded another 2,000 emails and documents in its "Podesta Emails" dossier, he also said he can prove he didn't do what the women say.

"We already have substantial evidence to dispute these lies," he added. "It will be made public in an appropriate way and at an appropriate time, very soon."
