

Embracing the Adventure of Doing Business With God

For decades, leaders of the faith and work movement have encouraged and equipped followers of Christ to integrate their faith into their work lives and see their work as significant to God's purposes for the world. A significant number of Christians in business have the hearts and mindsets to no longer separate their work lives from their spiritual lives. They are committed to doing business "as unto the Lord," as the apostle Paul encourages in Colossians 3:23.

However, the invitation that lies before every business leader is greater than many realize – it's an invitation to not only do business for the glory of God, but to do business with the presence of God and through the leading of the Holy Spirit. Embracing this perspective changes everything and propels you into an adventure that will ultimately unlock God's best for you and your sphere of influence in the marketplace.
