

End-Times Expert Shares Emotional Tribute He Wrote for D-Day

This week, the world remembers D-Day. Years ago, Joe Ardis Horn wrote this song in recognition of the sacrifices made that day. At the time, Joe's original song was played 24/7 on the Armed Forces Radio Network and was featured on military bases and in Soldier of Fortune magazine, even though he had only produced it in his home studio with a drum track and his guitar.

He did all the vocals and tried to capture the sound of planes, bombs and chaos with his playing. How many agree this should finally be professionally produced by Joe?
