

Endorsements Continue to Pour in for Bible-Believing Senate Candidate

“Men with a backbone of steel are hard to find these days, and even harder to find in the U.S. Senate,” former Senator and conservative icon Tom Coburn wrote in a statement endorsing Judge Roy Moore for Senate. “I proudly endorse Judge Moore because we need him to be a conservative voice in the Senate. He is a man who can’t be bought, who won’t fall in line with the Washington establishment and who will stand up for what he believes in.”

Senator Coburn is one of the most powerful conservative voices yet to come out for Judge Moore, but he’s hardly the only one.

“Roy Moore has more political spine than anyone I know,” said Kentucky Republican Rep. Thomas Massie in his endorsement. “He has twice chosen to lose his job rather than compromise his principles. He is a man willing to stand up to the out of control courts and help us return to the limited government outlined in our Constitution. I give him my full support and look forward to having him as a stalwart colleague in the Senate.”

Politico reports that House Freedom Caucus Chairman Mark Meadows endorsed former Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore for the Senate last Wednesday, delivering another conservative boost to Moore in the hotly contested primary.

“I am proud to endorse Judge Roy Moore for the U.S. Senate. The people of Alabama are seeing millions of dollars in false advertising flow into their state,” Meadows said in a statement released by the Moore campaign. “From what I know about the people of Alabama, their vote is not for sale. They want a strong man—a principled conservative—to send a clear message to Washington, D.C.”

Our good friend, Ken Cuccinelli, Chairman of the Senate Conservatives Fund, also endorsed Judge Moore, saying, “I’m proud to announce the Senate Conservatives Fund’s endorsement of Judge Roy Moore in Alabama’s special election for U.S. Senate.”

Cuccinelli noted in the group’s endorsement, “After collecting feedback from our supporters in Alabama and across the nation last week, an overwhelming 97 percent said they thought we should endorse Roy Moore in the primary election runoff.”

“Roy Moore is a proven conservative leader who will fight to cut spending, reform our nation’s tax system, secure our borders, defund Planned Parenthood and fully repeal Obamacare,” he added. “Like President Trump, Roy Moore is a political outsider who isn’t afraid to stand up to the liberals in his own party to get results for all Americans. Unlike so many Republicans who break their promises after they are elected, Roy Moore is someone we can count on.”

Notice a theme here?

Spine, backbone of steel, political outsider, isn’t afraid, a strong man, not for sale ... the exact opposite of what passes for a public servant in today’s Washington, D.C.

These endorsements are helping build momentum for Judge Moore, but it will take more than conservative unity to defeat the millions of special- interest dollars already flowing into incumbent Senator Strange’s campaign war chest.

Judge Roy Moore is the real deal, a Bible-believing Christian and a constitutional originalist who lives the values he campaigns on and will not be intimidated or bought by the Washington establishment. We urge all our conservative-populist friends in Alabama to unite behind Roy Moore, and all our readers across the country to support his campaign. Please
