

Ex-Psychic Warns Christians That Halloween Can Open 'Demonic Doors'

A woman who spent years working as a psychic before finding Jesus and renouncing the occult is warning Christians about the spiritual dangers associated with Halloween.

"Halloween, I really believe, opens demonic doors," Jenn Nizza told CBN's Faithwire. "And the season itself promotes divination ... it pushes out the Ouija board, witchcraft. You see it in stores, on social media, sweatshirts."

She said taking part in Halloween can be "very spiritually dangerous" and rebuffed claims from some believers that the day can in some way be "redeemed" and celebrated in a more positive or uplifting way.

"I think you have to think about—why are you trying to redeem something that is demonic?" Nizza said. "We're called to be godly parents."

The former medium warned that the "devil is manipulative" and sneaky and can and will use simple events to try and lure people away from the truth.

Watch Nizza discuss Halloween and her previous work as a psychic:

Today, Nizza said she wants nothing at all to do with Halloween, and explained how, in her previous work, she would often spend Oct. 31 working and doing readings.
