

Floyd Mayweather About Miss Jackson's Abortion: 'She Killed Our Twin Babies'

Floyd Mayweather is a fierce component in the ring—but he's also a champion for life.

The undefeated boxer is revealing inside information about why he broke up with Shantel Jackson. The 37-year-old heavy hitter was set to marry Jackson but his distaste for her pro-abortion maneuvers was a TKO for the once-happy relationship.

Mayweather last week posted a sonogram photo to his Facebook page and shared with his adoring fans the reason he untangled the knot: She had an abortion.

"The real reason me and Shantel Christine Jackson @missjackson broke up was because she got a abortion, and I'm totally against killing babies. She killed our twin babies," he captioned the photo.

Mayweather opened up even more in an interview with V-103, expressing his hurt over the abortion.

"It hurt my feelings, all because she's selfish because all she's worried about is looks, talking about, 'I don't want to mess my body up.' Everything you got on your body, I paid for so it's OK," he said. "Even if you had the baby—even if you had the babies, if you wanted me to put you back together like I did in the beginning, I could've done it again."

Jackson, 37, seems to have moved on in a hurry. Miss Jackson, as she's also known, is now dating the rapper known as Nelly.
