

Franklin Graham After Hillary Clinton Win: America Is in Serious Trouble

Evangelist Franklin Graham congratulated former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton on securing the support of enough delegates to wrap up the Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

Then he offered a dire warning.

"It seems congratulations are in order to Hillary Clinton this morning," he wrote on social media Tuesday morning. "According to the Associated Press, she now has enough delegates to win the Democratic nomination, even though Bernie Sanders disagrees and pledges to fight on."

As things stand right now, he said, it appears the presidential election this fall will be between Clinton and Donald Trump. But as he has been saying for months during his Decision America Tour, he's not endorsing any candidate for the November general election.

And now, he's asking Americans to pray.

"This nation is in serious trouble," he wrote. "Both the Democratic and the Republican parties have lost the moral vision for this nation.

"I pray that God will give us a president who is a strong and courageous leader and who has a vision for the future. We need a president who can lead this nation back to being one nation under God so that we can truly say 'In God we trust!'

"May God bless America again!"
