

Franklin Graham: America's in Critical Condition

"America is in critical condition," according to evangelist Franklin Graham.

Graham delivered that warning in Florida hours before Tuesday night's State of the Union address.

At a prayer rally in Tallahassee in front of Florida's state capitol, Graham said, "America is being stripped of its biblical heritage and God-inspired foundations."

He warned that "we've got maybe one election left" to preserve America's liberties, or "the game will be over."

The prayer rally was the second stop on Graham's 50-state Decision America Tour.

He's encouraging Christians to pray for America, vote in this year's elections and consider running for office.

The son of evangelist Billy Graham is expected to deliver a similar message Wednesday in front of Louisiana's capitol, hours before President Barack Obama arrives in Baton Rouge.
