As Christian Daily International reported, during a Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA) God Loves You tour in London, Franklin Graham shared to the masses that time was running out before the return of Christ and now is the moment to turn toward Him.

With an attendance of more than 17,000 at the June 21 event, Graham discussed global issues with the world, urging listeners to lean into Jesus.

“Since I last preached here in London two years ago, the world seems to be one step closer to Armageddon,” says Graham. “Many people feel hopeless, and they’re asking, is the world running out of time? You can come to the One who can turn that around, and that is the Lord Jesus Christ, God’s Son.”

Graham then quoted John 3:16, calling all those in attendance to reach out to Jesus as their personal Lord and Savior.

In a world gripped by chaos, war and spiritual confusion, Graham's message is more than a warning—it's a call to radical surrender. As society edges ever closer to what Scripture describes as the final days, the need for a firm foundation in Christ has never been more urgent. It's not enough to acknowledge Jesus as Savior; we must also recognize Him as Lord.

As we approach the end times, this kind of full surrender becomes not just important but essential. Graham's powerful reminder in London makes it clear: the clock is ticking, and the only way to stand firm in the shaking is to fully submit to the King who never changes.
