

Franklin Graham Urges Boycott on Pro-Gay Companies

Christian boycotts have moved mountains in the past. But some believers are dead set against them.

Evangelist Franklin Graham isn't too concerned with what people think. He's only concerned about what God thinks.

As for Graham, he'll no longer do business with pro-gay companies and he's suggesting you follow his lead.

"Have you ever asked yourself, 'How can we fight the tide of moral decay that is being crammed down our throats by big business, the media, and the gay (and) lesbian community?'" Graham wrote on Facebook.

"Every day it is something else! Tiffany's started advertising wedding rings for gay couples. Wells Fargo bank is using a same-sex couple in their advertising. And there are more. But it has dawned on me that we don't have to do business with them."

Graham went on to reveal that the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association is moving its accounts from Wells Fargo to another bank. He will no longer shop at Tiffany, either.

"This is one way we as Christians can speak out—we have the power of choice," Graham says. "Let's just stop doing business with those who promote sin and stand against Almighty God's laws and His standards. Maybe if enough of us do this, it will get their attention."
