

God Still Heals

I was taken to a hospital, where I spent two weeks in a coma with a multiple skull fracture and a fractured jaw. I spent six weeks in the intensive care unit and another six weeks in rehabilitation, undergoing occupational, physical and speech therapy.

Finally, I was discharged and started putting the past behind me. I know the prayers of my parents, my friends, my teachers and my church helped me to recover.

What a great God we serve! He allowed me to live, to marry my husband, Vance, and to raise our two beautiful sons. We are all on this earth for a very short time, and we need to serve our Father to the best of our ability.

I thank God that I can care for my two boys. I'm thankful, too, that after three surgeries on my eyes to correct a problem with double vision, I can even drive a car! I believe our Lord still heals, in His time, when we pray in His name.
