

God's Guest List

Debbie Macomber | Howard Books

Debbie Macomber—herself admired by fans as an author of New York Times best-selling fiction—confesses that she longed to meet certain people she admired or who inspired her. But, in meeting some of them, she discovered they weren't all she had expected. Disappointed, she soon realized that the people who had the most profound effect on her life were the ones God wanted her to meet.

In God's Guest List: Welcoming Those Who Influence Our Lives, Macomber encourages readers to take their focus off of those they perceive to be important and begin to view every person they meet as an opportunity to grow, to bless and be blessed. In her case, one of the people God wanted her to “meet” was her own mother, who she felt was perpetually disappointed in her, and one of her assistants, who was fond of being in control.

With humility, Macomber admits that she fell into a focus on celebrity. In God's Guest List, she helps readers who, like herself, are ready to take on God's priorities and look for His hand in their lives.
