

Hailey Baldwin Says 'Following Jesus Together' Is Foundation of Marriage to Justin Bieber

Hailey Baldwin Bieber credits faith in Jesus Christ as the foundation for her marriage to Justin Bieber.

"Being able to share that with each other—to have that bond of faith and spirituality—is so [critical] for us," Hailey said in her ELLE cover story. "It's the most important part of our relationship, following Jesus together, being a part of the church community together. It's everything."

The young supermodel was unashamed to share just how significant faith has been throughout her life.

"As I got older, it got harder to follow church and the Bible because it felt very adult. I don't want to sound wrong, but it was boring. I didn't care about it anymore, until I found a church I felt was geared toward young people. And for me, that was the Hillsong Church in New York City," Hailey said. "It started to feel like my own little community of people who were also young and following God and just immersed in a church community. Then I developed my own relationship to church and my own relationship with God, separate from being raised that way by my parents. That's been a cool journey for me."

The young wife also said faith was her saving grace when she and Justin first legally wed at a courthouse. At the time, Justin had yet to be diagnosed with Lyme disease.

"When we first got married, we were just figuring out our life together. I felt like putting a wedding in the middle of all of that would be really hectic and stressful,” Hailey said.
