

Hillary Clinton Admits She's on More Medication

Remember how Hillary Clinton said concerns about her health were “conspiracy theories” concocted by Donald Trump’s campaign?

Well, based on a video taken from a press gaggle on her campaign plane Tuesday, she’s now increasing her “antihistamine load” to address her recent coughing fits, which she claims are the result of seasonable allergies. She had made a similar statement to the New York Times earlier in the day.

Antihistamines are carefully monitored when prescribed by a physician. According to the Mayo Clinic, antihistamine overuse can result in the following side effects:

- Drowsiness
- Unsteadiness or clumsiness
- Concentration problems
- Blurry vision
- Seizures
- Tremors
- Muscle spasms
- Ringing in the ears
- Mouth dryness
- Hallucinations
- Fainting
- Sleeping problems
- Facial redness or flushing

But as has been noted previously, prescription antihistamine use isn’t required for simple seasonal allergies, as is noted in the letter from Clinton’s personal physician. The mainstream media, despite being forced to confront the issue of Clinton’s coughing fits for the first time this week, has yet to confront this incongruity.
