

Hillary Clinton Opposes Organ Harvesting – of Elephants, Not Babies

Hillary Clinton is an advocate for elephants, condemning the ivory trade which destroys the beautiful animals in order to thrive, but don't call on her to speak out about the harvesting of human baby body parts by Planned Parenthood. Hillary is a huge supporter of Planned Parenthood and abortion rights and has remained quiet on recent undercover videos produced by the Center for Medical Progress, which shows two top Planned Parenthood doctors (so far) haggling over the price they will get from organs they cut out of unborn babies, some as old as 17 weeks and older. In one video you can hear the Planned Parenthood abortionist describe how she will "crush above" and "crush below" the infant in the womb, to keep intact the specific organs that the "buyer" is requesting. Despite the barbaric nature of what Planned Parenthood is doing, Hillary has remained eerily quiet, a point her female GOP rival, Carly Fiorina, was quick to point out. "Well, she hasn't said a word," Fiorina told Bill O'Reilly. Enter the elephants. Despite the political symbol of the Republican Party being an elephant, Hillary Rodham Clinton, who is running for president as a Democrat, seems to have an infatuation with elephants. In fact, Hillary recently narrated a documentary called White Gold about the fascinating creatures. In the trailer, Hillary can be heard saying, "Elephants are known to possess complex intelligence and most remarkably – they mourn their dead." "This pregnant cow was sprayed with bullets," the pro-abortion Democrat says with shock in the film. The images are shocking and the story of the elephants needs to be told. But why isn't the story of unborn babies being told? Why does Hillary advocate for animals while promoting the slaughter of human babies in the womb? "This is the ugly truth of the ivory trade," Hillary says. Does anyone else see Hilary's outspokenness on this and her silence on Planned Parenthood as a bit is hypocritical? Hillary Clinton is extremely pro-abortion, she and her husband, former President Bill Clinton, supported the most radical abortion policies prior to the Obama administration. In fact, at one point, Hillary proudly defended the gruesome partial birth abortion procedure and in a speech she once congratulated the largest abortion lobby group in the nation, NARAL, calling abortion a "fundamental American value and freedom." Recently, Hillary defended late-term abortions, calling a ban on abortion after 20 weeks "extreme and unacceptable." Ironically Hillary, also admitted that she admires the eugenic work of Planned Parenthood and even partnered with the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, also a proponent of eugenics and financier of abortion. Given all this history on abortion, it seems obvious enough to me that Hillary's silence on Planned Parenthood is not silence at all. UPDATE 723/2015 : Late Thursday Hillary finally responded by – blaming the filmmakers. From CNN: "Planned Parenthood has apologized for the insensitivity of the employee who was taped and they will continue to answer questions for Congress and others," Clinton said. The former secretary of state said that she was aware of the videos, but "don't have all the facts" about them. "For more than a century, Planned Parenthood has provided essential services for women," Clinton said. "And I think it is unfortunate that Planned Parenthood had been the object of such a concerted attacks for so many years. It's really is an attack against a women's right to choose to make the most personal, difficult decisions that any woman would face based on her faith and the medical advice that she is given." Clinton added, "I am hoping that this situation will not further undermine the very important services that Planned Parenthood provides across our country." course she does. Hillary wouldn't want to be publicly defending this Nazi-style operation while running to become the world's top leader, now would she? Reprinted from
