

Hollywood Needs Jesus: Steven Spielberg's Daughter Applies to Be a Sex Worker

Editor's Note: This article contains content that discusses the porn industry. Please know that Movieguide® doesn't condone sexual promiscuity and only wishes to offer thoughts to encourage readers that God is indeed vital for the Hollywood community.

Steven Spielberg's 23-year-old daughter, Mikaela Spielberg, reveals that we need God in Hollywood because she applied to become a sex worker in the state of Tennessee.

In an exclusive interview with The Sun, Steven Spielberg said that she's a "sexual creature" and would love to work as a stripper in the future. Tennessee requires a license for public eroticism for compensation.

The Indiana Jones director and his wife, actress Kate Capshaw, adopted Mikaela as a baby and are reportedly "intrigued" by her new career path.

Mikaela Spielberg is engaged to a 47-year-old man who wrestled with her sex work endeavors and then eventually got on board. Mikaela Spielberg told The Sun, "I don't want to do [videos] outside of solo stuff because I feel like it would be a violation of my boundaries and my relationship with my significant other."

Mikaela Spielberg also said, "I'm doing this not out of an urge to hurt anybody or be spiteful about it; I'm doing this because I want to honor my body in a way that's lucrative."

Read the rest of this article at Movieguide®. Find out what God is doing in Hollywood!