How Bible’s Divine Wealth Codes Can Help Guard Against Antichrist’s End-Times Schemes

Christian mentor and investor Rob Saunders says that when it comes to the end times, it all comes back to money.

The Antichrist—also referred to as “the beast” in different portions of Revelation—will require all of mankind to use the “mark of the beast” to buy and sell, says Saunders on the “Greenelines” podcast.

“They’re actually doing it now, between your thumb and your forefinger—that little fat in your hand,” he says. “They’re putting a chip in there. You can put your credit card in your hand, and you won’t be able to buy and sell in U.S. currency without the mark of the beast. So the bottom line is that it all comes back to money.”

Thankfully, though, the Bible teaches specific principles about money that Christians can use to avoid the enemy’s traps. Saunders calls these “the Divine Wealth Codes.”

“The Divine Wealth Codes are just part of all of what God wants to give you,” he says. ” … You’re doing business one of two ways. You’re doing business by Harvard Business School or you’re doing business by the Divine Wealth Codes as taught in the Bible. And 99% of Christians are doing business in the world’s way.

“Jesus said no man can serve two masters. You can’t do it. You’ll either hate the one—and He’s talking about God here—you’ll either hate God and love the other or not. You cannot serve God in the spirit of Mammon, which is a lord, a spirit and a power."

But how does a Spirit-filled believer truly walk in the Lord's economy as opposed to the world's economy? Listen to the podcast to hear Saunders answer this profound question. {eoa}