

I Agree to the Terms-of The Antichrist!

How many times this year did you sign up for access to the internet while in a hotel? How often did you give permission to a website you wanted to visit to allow cookies? Or how often, when signing up for a new download, did you agree to their terms? If it's something you want, you will quickly agree to the terms by checking the box: "I agree."

Never before has the vast majority of the world been connected through the thing we call internet (which has only been with us for 30 years). According to Statista, in 2022 there will be over 6.6 billion smartphones in use.

Never before have we surrendered our finances with complete trust to the online banking systems that we use. This system, by the way, is only 30 years old and has created the greatest shift in the way we think, communicate and, most of all, do our banking.

Keep one thing in mind: The pressure of the beast of Revelation to receive his mark will come primarily in two ways. First, there will be pressure from those who fully support his political accomplishments and agenda. He will be a political rock star and a master deceiver. And second, there will be pressure in the form of financial blackmail.

We are already connected to the system. We are already all-in as far as the internet goes. All the beast of Revelation has to do is to shut us out, not from Facebook or Instagram, but from our banking, our access to money. When he has temporarily shut off that access, you will only have to "agree to his terms" to get your access back. It will be just one more "I agree" click.
