

In a World of Deception, Who Can Discern the Truth?

In our world today, truth has been turned upside down. People are clamoring to find the truth to know who and what they can trust. No one wants to be lied to—not even a pathological liar likes being lied to. We’ve had conflicting reports through media from so-called leaders and scientists regarding COVID-19. People are delivering conflicting information which does not allow us to make informed decisions, further putting our health and our lives at risk. How can we trust media, scientists, government? How can we know what’s true?

More than any other time in our lifetimes, we need to learn how to think critically for ourselves and how to research to find the truthful answers we need. When searching to know if a matter is true, understand there are governing laws we need to know about.
