"I'll tell you, yesterday morning I woke up, I went to bed around 1 in the morning. And I woke up around 3:30 in the morning. And you know my mind is racing. I'm the kind of guy I sleep like a baby even the past couple of weeks going through this vetting process for the vice presidential nomination. I still slept like a baby."

However, on that particular night, Vance couldn't sleep as he normally would. Instead, he felt anxious and knew he needed a touch from God.

"For some reason, yesterday, the morning of the biggest speech of my life, I've [gotten] two-and-a-half hours of sleep, my kids aren't going to be up for three or four hours, so I'm bored, alone, anxious and thoughts are racing through my head a mile a minute," he continues.

It was at this moment that Vance called on the name above every other name: the name of Jesus.

“After 30 minutes of trying to count finally just say, ‘Jesus, please help me.’ And I’m not kidding, that was the last thing that I remembered until three hours felt the touch of God.”
