

Jeb Bush: Barack Obama 'is a Christian'

Not everyone will vouch for President Barack Obama's Christian faith. At times, even he seems confused. But Jeb Bush says he has no doubt about Obama's faith.

"He is a Christian," Bush told a crowd of 2,000 Republicans on Mackinac Island, Michigan.

The media feeding frenzy began when Donald Trump took a question from a man at a town hall event. That man prefaced his question to Trump by saying Obama is a Muslim and was not born in the United States.

Trump, obviously uncomfortable, tried to hurry the man up, then curtly answered his question—which was about alleged Muslim terrorist training centers inside the United States.

However, Trump did not say that Obama is a Christian or an American.

On Meet the Press Sunday, Trump told Chuck Todd that a Muslim could become president of the United States "at some point."

"Some people have said it already happened, frankly," he said.

Not everyone believes that President Obama is a Christian. I have previously written about why so many people believe Barack Obama is not a Christian.

Rev. Franklin Graham has said that Obama told him in 2004 that he only began attending church when he worked as a community organizer in Chicago, in order to establish political ties through the local churches.

Do you think Obama is a Christian? A secret Muslim? Or a committed secularist using religious language for his own purposes?
