

Jennifer LeClaire's Warning: 'We are in a Season of War'

"The thief does not come, except to steal, and kill and destroy. I came that they may have life, and that they may have it more abundantly," (John 10:10).

During a time of year where people find entertainment in the demonic, Jennifer LeClaire is warning the body of Christ against the season known for celebrating witchcraft.

"We are in a season of war," LeClaire says. "I call it 'witchcraft season.' Every time this time of year around late September, early October, we see massive warfare."

LeClaire points out that this is a time when witches are using spells, incantations and voodoo to bring about destruction on our cities and towns.

"It's real. Their agenda is to release oppression, confusion and chaos. And some of them will visit churches," LeClaire says. "While there's no distance in the spirit, proximity makes it a little easier because they can take the cues from the body language. They can tell if things are working. They can leave things in your midst: A string, a piece of fabric to have a point of contact by which to do witchcraft on you even after you leave."

So, what are the believers to do when it comes to dealing with these witchcraft attacks?

"Many believers don't discern the spiritual war or the symptoms of witchcraft, and what happens in this season is they lose spiritual momentum. They start to draw back instead of pressing into God," LeClaire says. "We need to stop running from the battle line and start running to the battle line, going on the offense instead of sticking back on our heels on the defense."

"The enemy wants you to back up. He wants you to beat you up in your mind," LeClaire continues. "Until you lose your will to fight."

This means that Christians need to fervently stand tall with the full armor of God upon them. Instead of backing down from prayer and time spent with God, we must dive in deeper to know Him more fully. We must come into agreement with other believers that no weapon formed against us can prosper because there is no power greater than the power of the Holy Spirit.

"We all feel like quitting sometimes; that's the enemy. When you feel like quitting, when you get discouraged, you've got to rise up and fight that thing," says LeClaire. "It's not enough to pray your way through; you've got to praise your way through."

While the enemy will take out all the stops he possibly can to try to discourage us, direct us down the wrong road and bring us to a place of complete loss, we mustn't stop fighting the good fight of faith. We are to armor up using the Word of God as a sword, the weapon which cannot and will not fail us during our spiritual battles.
