

Jennifer Lopez Says 'It's Silliness' That Some Christians Criticized Her Hypersexualized Halftime Performance

Jennifer Lopez was asked late last week what she thought about those who felt her performance at the Super Bowl LIV was too racy, and her response was laughter.

Dismissing those who disagreed as a "small faction" of people, she told Variety that it's "silliness" to call it inappropriate while adding both she and Shakira are "really respectful performers who are moms, have kids, who are very conscious of what we do."

Lopez didn't outline her definition of respectful nor explain how her skimpy outfit and pole dancing fit into those parameters.
