

Jeremiah Johnson Ministries Calls for Immediate Intercession for President Trump

Over the past year, there has been much discussion over Jeremiah Johnson's book Trump and the Future of America.

Of particular interest is Chapter 9 ,where Johnson gave an answer to the most frequent question he had been receiving at the time (and throughout the year leading up to Nov. 3), "Will Donald Trump win the 2020 election?"

His answer in the chapter titled "The Winner of the 2020 Election" is currently unfolding as the nation watches state polling results trickle in, according to a special edition of Watchmen Wednesday.

In this chapter, Johnson discusses a dream he had where he saw a vision of President Trump running the Boston Marathon.

As he approached the finish line, onlookers began to hiss, shout and spit on the president as he neared closer and closer to the finish.

As he drew within 100 yards—the president fell.

Completely exhausted and gasping for air to get up and cross the finish line, two older women emerged from the crowd and somehow squeezed past the bulky security guards.

One of the two women required a walker just to be able to advance closer to the ailing president—the other, a cane.

As they drew near to him, a supernatural rush of wind enabled them to lift the president and inch him ever so slightly across the finish line.

After the dream, Johnson was given the revelation that the two older women represented the role of the praying church who would carry him across the finish line in a last-second victory.

These two women (the praying church) also represented an entire generation of people in the U.S.—the Baby Boomers.

We believe that the Baby Boomers have done their part in this election to make sure to get out and cast their vote, as we saw millions standing in lines wrapping around city blocks for the chance to make sure their votes were counted.

But now is the time for the supernatural rush of wind that is stirred up by the prayers of the church.

“Saints, we are in the middle of this prophecy,” according to the ministry. “Will you join in and bombard heaven with your prayers to supernaturally lift up President Trump and help him edge over the finish line?”

This is what will ultimately determine the outcome of this long and grueling election.

There’s an enormous battle raging right now in the spiritual realm. The darkness is trying to prevent itself from being exposed.

We’re calling all saints, intercessors and prayer warriors to lift up the supernatural wind and help the president, who is called for such a time as this, to cross the finish line.

Will you intercede for this nation? {eoa}
