

Joe's Judgment: Speaking the Truth

The wheels of judgment grind slowly, but surely. Tens of millions in America and elsewhere believe it's all over for Joe Biden and his presidency. He may not agree, but the swell is building daily that will overwhelm his stubborn resistance and state of denial upon discovery of 10 visits from a Parkinson's specialist.

His recent disastrous debate debacle calculated to restore some semblance of credibility exploded before multitudes watching worldwide. His follow up interview with senior news editor George Stephanopoulos on ABC was yet another unmitigated disaster. We're watching the most serious presidential controversy since 1974's Watergate scandal.

Actor and director Clint Eastwood, 93, keeps going strong (like Gene Hackman, 94; Warren Buffett, 93; Bernie Marcus, 95; and even Donald Trump, 78). Eastwood famously said, "A man's gotta know his limitations," but the Bidens aren't reading the handwriting on the wall, so the pressure is mounting to get them to exit quickly. You know it's serious when even uberliberal panelists on "The View" agree.

The prophetic book of Daniel, which Jesus referenced, records a leader whom God had to jolt out of deception by saying, "God has numbered your kingdom and put an end to it" (Dan. 5:26, NASB); "You have been weighed in the balance, and found wanting" (Dan. 5:27, NKJV). That's Biden.

The book also details how Daniel found the warning from Jeremiah regarding the Jews' 70-year captivity but also the news that judgment would fall on Babylon and its leader as God said, "Enough is enough."

Recently Bill O'Reilly, the No. 1 bestselling author of nonfiction in our history, conceded he was taking a big risk in making a statement, but because he believes there is a Judgment Day, he made it anyway. He said as he considered the blood on Biden's hands from his unfettered abortion promotion and incalculable deaths from open border rapes, sex trafficking, child smuggling, carte blanche drug distribution and cartel killings, he would never want to be Biden on the day of judgment. I agree.
