

Jonathan Cahn Calls for Day of Prayer and Fasting on Election Day; 'Harbinger II: The Return' Author Warns of 'Danger of Judgment' on America

Jonathan Cahn is known across America and the globe as the author of this year's runaway bestseller, The Harbinger II: The Return, one of the most dramatic successes in book publishing. He's known for many other successes as well, including his book The Harbinger, which first launched him to prominence.

Today, Cahn is calling on all Americans to pray and fast on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 3, given the high stakes for the country after a dramatic year of what Cahn calls "the shakings"—something for which his book, The Harbinger II: The Return, provides prophetic, biblical explanations.

"This year of 2020 has been a most pivotal year. Now we stand at the precipice, approaching the most pivotal election of our lifetime," said Cahn. "It will determine the future of this nation and even of the world."

Added Cahn, "This election will either extend the window of grace America has to return to the Lord—or it will shut that window and seal its departure from God and its progression to judgment. For those who know the biblical template of national judgment I have written of in my Harbinger books, the danger of judgment coming to America is very real."

Cahn said he believes "our national fabric is in danger of

For these reasons, Cahn said that “beyond voting at the ballot box, the most powerful thing we can do is to vote in the presence of God with prayers and intercession. Therefore, I am compelled to call for a Day of Prayer and Fasting on the exact day of decision—Nov. 3, 2020. Let us make this Election Day, the day of God’s election, the Day of Prayer and Fasting.”

Cahn pointed out that the “issues in this election have never been as stark. One agenda seeks to uphold biblical morality—the other will oppose it. One agenda seeks to uphold the life of the unborn—the other seeks to expand their murder. One agenda seeks to protect religious freedom and the preaching of the gospel—the other will ultimately seek to bring it to an end. We have never been at such a critical moment.”

It is why, Jonathan Cahn said, “If we do nothing to oppose the darkness, to shine the light, then we will be accountable before God, for the fate of the lost, for the next generation and for the blood of millions. If you are able to vote,” he said, directly addressing Americans, “You must.”

Cahn reminds all Americans: “One month ago, millions of believers came before the Lord in prayer according to 2 Chronicles 7:14. It has been a season of prayer, a call from the Lord. Let us now seal it all on the day of this most critical election. Spread the word, tell your friends, your pastors, your loved ones, commit that day in your homes, on your jobs, in your churches, your fellowships, to humble ourselves, to pray, to seek His face and to turn from our evil ways—that He will hear from heaven and answer us.”
