

Kamala Just Told Christians Not to Vote for Her

Kamala Harris has just told Christians not to vote for her.

Her exact words were, "You are in the wrong rally." How does that translate to, "If you are Christian, you should not vote for me"? Here is the explanation. It happened at her Wisconsin rally.

While speaking, she elaborated on the glory of abortion. The crowd, which had been subdued till then, began cheering wildly in favor of killing babies. When the cheers died down, one man in the crowd shouted, "Jesus is Lord!"

Harris taunted him by saying, "You are in the wrong rally."

But he had said nothing against abortion. He wore nothing MAGA. The only thing Harris knew was that he was a Christian. The crowd cheered again, apparently thrilled to know that Christians are not welcome in their party.

Yet there is something more significant. As I said, the man wore nothing that revealed he was a Trump supporter. This makes what she said much more blatant. She is telling us that Christians belong in the Trump campaign, but not in the Democratic campaign.
