

Kenneth Copeland: 'We're in the Sliver of Grace' Before Last Harbinger Strikes

New York Times best-selling author Rabbi Jonathan Cahn sat down with pastor and evangelist Kenneth Copeland to discuss where the world is in the timeline of God's judgment.

The eighth and ninth harbingers, that is, warning signs of God's judgment, have begun, but not all hope is lost.

"And I think there's a reason—you know, the Lord—one of the things since The Harbinger came out, the Lord keeps opening doors for me to go to Washington, more than ever in my life, to go there again and again. Actually, the book actually opened up the doors for prayer in—in Washington. And there are people—I mean, actually, I think every member of Congress has received The Harbinger. And—and there are people in Congress who are godly people, but they're a remnant. They're a—they're not in—they're not the president," Cahn says, according to a transcript. "I mean, I'm—they're not—they're not the ones in the—but they're there. Some of them are running for president, and they know The Harbinger. And so that's what we're praying for, because, yes, you need to have a leader, a Josiah."

But most of the prophesied warning signs have come to pass, and America is in the "sliver of grace" before God's judgment comes to pass, unless the nation repents.

"It's time to pray and intercede, not—not just for the nation. And hear—hear me about this because we're out of time," Copeland says, according to a transcript. "But I—I want to get—I want to get this in there. As we pray, as—as God's people intercede for the outpouring of God's glory—and it's here. But as we intercede for it, we pull on it. Our faith pulls on it. In doing that, we're actually praying for this nation and for this planet. Glory to God.”
