Growing up a preacher's kid, Kerrie Roberts witnessed her parents continually offering the love of Christ to broken and hurting people. Through her music she aims to present that same compassion and hope. "A lot of people eventually lose their faith if they came into it expecting Christianity to be all bright and shiny with a God who only answers their prayers with a yes," she says, "I wanted this album to be an honest reflection of the Christian life—that we serve a God who allows suffering but is with you through that suffering."
