

Larry Tomczak's Week in Review: Great News for an Upside-Down World

Amidst the avalanche of depressing news bombarding us almost daily comes an announcement of an uplifting and much-needed new book from one of America's most influential evangelicals, Stephen Strang.

On May 16, Charisma House will release "Spirit-Led Living in an Upside-Down World," a different type of book than what Stephen has published in recent years. Its message, why the Christian life is impossible without the Holy Spirit, is particularly crucial for believers in these end times.

Spirit-led living means to follow a different path from what the world says you pursue. It's having different values, goals and measurements from those dictated by the world. Spirit-living led will set you apart and people will certainly know to whom you belong—Jesus Christ.

When Time magazine honored the founder of Charisma Media with the designation a number of years ago of being one of the top 25 most influential evangelicals in America, they did it because of his noteworthy achievements and keen insight into unfolding world events.

Recently at the Roundtable leadership summit in South Carolina, Stephen sat down for a brief interview where he shared about his latest, offering to equip and encourage Christians across America.

Take 10 to invest in listening to this man of God, who has been both a pioneer and partner with patriotic followers of Jesus Christ. He loves this great nation and is committed to upholding its biblically based foundations in one of the most trying times in our history. {eo}
