

Liberty Counsel Condemns Obama's Israel Policy

The founders of Liberty Counsel just returned from Israel. Mathew and Anita Staver met privately with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to express the strong support of the America people for Israel.

President Obama has called for Israel to return to the indefensible pre-1967 borders, which would make Israel only nine miles wide and thus lead to the complete destruction of the Jewish people.

During the meeting, Netanyahu said that conflict over the right of Israel to exist is at its core a battle over values and Western civilization. "In America, you need to ask the question, WWAD, What Would America Do?" he asked.

Indeed, what would we do if England or Spain asked us to return to our pre-1776 borders? Every Israeli leader the Stavers met with over the past week expressed the same sentiment.

In Netanyahu's recent address to a joint session of the United States Congress, he said that he is willing to accept a Palestinian state; however it is time for President Abbas to stand up before his people and say, "I will accept a Jewish state." For peace negotiations to be successful, Palestine must acknowledge Israel's right to exist as a state. Netanyahu said, "With those six words, the Israeli people will be prepared to make a far-reaching compromise."

Already, preparations are being made for a second flotilla attempt on Gaza. The first time brought significant outcry against Israel, even though videos of the interaction clearly showed Israel reacting in self defense as their boat was boarded and they were beaten by the demonstrators. Israel, just as America, must have the ability to defend itself or it will be destroyed by those committed to its annihilation.

Liberty Counsel condemns the Obama Administration's current policy toward Israel. It must be thoroughly reexamined and then changed appropriately. In September, the United Nations is slated to vote whether to recognize a Palestinian state. If they do, they will be sanctioning Israel's sworn enemy who, for a generation, has refused to even acknowledge Israel's right to exist as a nation. Liberty Counsel has created a sticker that proudly proclaims "Stand with Israel."

"Now more than ever, Israel needs America and America needs Israel," concludes Mat Staver.

Tens of thousands of Americans have signed Liberty Counsel's "Stand with Israel" petition.
